The King and the Carpenter

Once upon a time, there ruled a very stubborn* king on a Caribbean island.

One night, this king was gazing* out of his palace window when he saw the moon, silver and shining, high up in the sky. It was so beautiful that he reached out his hand to touch it. But, of course, the moon was too far away. Frustrated*, the king summoned* the royal carpenter* and ordered him to build a tower to the moon.

"But Your Majesty*," the woodworker* answered, "what you ask is impossible."

"Nothing is impossible," said the king. "Build me a tower or I will have you killed. You have until tomorrow to give me an answer."

That night, the carpenter didn't sleep a wink*. The next morning, the artisan* said to the ruler, "If you take all the wooden chests* in the land* and put them one on top of the other, they will make a tower that should reach the moon."

The king liked this idea and told him to carry it out*. But after the boxes were all piled up, they did not even touch the clouds. The king now ordered the craftsman* to make still more. Still, the tower only got as far as the clouds. "Cut down all the trees in the forests," demanded the king. Every tree in the kingdom was cut down, and more chests were made. The king himself climbed up his tower and now the moon was right in front of him. He reached out and he could almost put his hand on it. "One more," shouted the king to the carpenter who was at the base of the tower.

"There is no more wood," yelled back the puzzled* laborer*.

"Then take the chest from the very bottom of* the pile and hand it up to me," commanded* the king in an angry voice. "Do it now or I will cut your head off."

The moment the carpenter pulled out the bottom crate*, the whole tower collapsed*, and that was the end of the king.

At its heart, the Internet is about communication. Most people use the Net to meet new friends and stay in touch with old ones. Over the years, whole new communities have grown online. For billions of people, belonging to an Internet community is important to their lives.

Since the Internet's early years, many websites have included forums. People join forums to discuss hobbies and subjects which interest them. Besides posting public messages, members can contact friends through PMs (private messages).

In the mid-2000s, "social networking" sites like Facebook and Twitter grew very quickly. On Facebook, members write about their daily lives. Photos, music, videos, and links to interesting articles can also be posted. On Twitter, people "tweet" what's on their minds using very few words.

These sites are very popular. Facebook has more than one billion members. Many people spend several hours a day on the site. Posting every day and keeping up with friends' pages takes a lot of time!

That worries some people. Is it healthy to spend so much time online? There are also questions about safety. What kinds of private details should people post and tweet? These are not easy questions, and we're still figuring out the answers.

(29) What is the main idea?

- ① Internet is home to many of our most important social groups.
- ② Some people post a lot of private information on sites like Twitter.
- ③ Websites grow and shrink in size all the time.
- ④ On social networking sites, you can learn about new hobbies.
- ⑤ Cybersecurity is a growing concern in our digital world.

(30) What does the article suggest about Internet forums?

- ① People must not discuss hobbies on Internet forums.
- ② They have only become popular over the last year.
- ③ Very few websites have them.
- ④ They include public and private ways to communicate.
- ⑤ They are usually visited by people at work.

(31) What is NOT something people can do on Facebook?

- ① Post a link to interesting articles
- ② Upload personal photos
- ③ Add songs to a web page
- ④ Write about daily activities
- ⑤ Look for jobs

(32) Why are some people worried about Facebook?

- ① The site's owners make members post personal details.
- ② Personal information was leaked from Facebook.
- ③ Members sometimes spend a lot of time on the site.
- ④ It is more popular than Twitter.
- ⑤ Not enough people have joined up.

(33) What does the phrase belonging to in line 3 mean?

- ① owning something
- ② being part of
- ③ making sure of
- ④ finding out about
- ⑤ running out of
